Question 4

Read the passage given below and answer the questions (a), (b) and (c) that follow:

- (1) I could hear the squeaking that heralded the evening arrival of the bats. I listened to the noises of the approaching night. Every day my hearing grew sharper. I was learning to filter out whatever I did not need to listen to, and giving no sign that I could hear everything that went on in the house.
- (2) I could not sleep. The air was heavy and still, the moon hidden behind thick banks of cloud. Lord Otori was sound asleep. I did not want to leave the house I'd come to love so much, but I seemed to be bringing nothing but trouble to it. Perhaps it would be better for everyone if I just vanished in the night.

- (3) Now I heard the hiss of hot water as the bath was prepared, the clatter of dishes from the kitchen, the sliding sigh of the cook's knife, a dog barking two streets away, and the sounds of feet on the wooden bridges on the canals. I knew the sounds of the house, day and night, in sunshine and under the rain. This evening I realized I was always listening for something more. I was waiting too. For what?
- I began to wonder if I could get out of the house without setting the dogs barking and arousing the guards. I started consciously listening for the dogs. Usually I heard them bark on and off throughout the night, but I'd learned to distinguish their barks and to ignore them. I set my ears for them but heard nothing. Then I started listening for the guards: the sound of a foot on stone or a whispered conversation. Nothing. Sounds that should have been there were missing from the night's familiar web.
- (5) Now I was wide-awake, straining my ears to hear. There came the slightest of sounds, hardly more than a tremor, between the window and the ground.
- (6) For a moment I thought it was the earth shaking, as it so often did. Another 25 tiny tremble followed, then another. Someone was climbing up the side of the house.
- (7) My first instinct was to yell out, but cunning took over. I rose from the mattress and crept silently to Lord Otori's side. I knelt beside him and whispered in his ear, "Lord Otori, someone is outside."
- (8) He woke instantly, and then reached for the sword and knife that lay beside him. I gestured to the window. The faint tremor came again.
- (9) Lord Otori passed the knife to me and stepped to the wall. I moved to the other side of the window. We waited for the assassin to climb in.

------

(10)		up by step he came up the wall, stealthy and unhurried, as if he had all the are in the world. We waited for him with the same patience.
(11)	He paused on the sill to take out the knife he planned to use on us, and then stepped inside. Lord Otori took him in a stranglehold. The intruder wriggled backwards. I leaped at him, and the three of us fell into the garden like a flurry of fighting cats.
(12)	Otor	The man fell first, across the stream, striking his head on a boulder. Lord Dtori landed on his feet. My fall was broken by one of the shrubs. The ntruder groaned, tried to rise, but slipped back into the water.
(13)	"Get	Get a light," Lord Otori said.
(14)		ran to the house, took a light that still burned in one of the candle stands and carried it back to the garden.
(15)	a po	e assassin had died without regaining consciousness. It turned out he had poison pellet in his mouth and had crushed it as he fell. He was dressed in ack, with no marking on his clothes. I held the light over him. There was thing to tell us who he was.
